June 10-11, 2021 | Presenting with confidence – from conferences to colloquiums (online workshop)

Organizer | Gender Equality Office
---|---
Seminar talk | German/English (as needed)
Target group | Doctoral students and postdoctoral researchers

Objectives/content

An academic career provides many opportunities to present your knowledge to expert audiences and discuss research work. Whether at conferences, cooperation meetings, project meetings, during doctoral defense, in colloquiums or public lectures, in addition to being well-organized, you also have to present a confident appearance based on inner conviction and expressed in a positive self-image. Many exercises using verbal, para-verbal and non-verbal language are performed to strengthen self-awareness and confidence when practicing freedom of speech in the academic world. Presenting can be fun – which is what this workshop teaches!

Content:

- Self-presentation training: presenting major achievements in a convincing manner,
- Presentation organization: from captivating introduction to effective conclusion,
- Body language, status and gender,
- Position and visibility in the academic community,
- Positive language and manner of speaking: internal and external expressiveness,
- Concentration and relaxation exercises, voice and speech training,
- Introductory talks by the instructor and interactive simulation exercises.
